Dear Dr. Sundlof,

I request the FDA ban antibiotics used to promote growth in farm animals. It is my understanding not to comply with the above, poses a dangerous threat to humans.

1. Most of the antibiotics administered to farm animals have nothing to do with treating their illnesses.
2. There is evidence that bacteria in animals become resistant to antibiotics they are given, and these bacteria infect humans through milk, meat, and eggs they eat.
3. Animals fed a nutritious diet, and live in a healthy environment do not require growth promoters.

Thank you for your support.

Sincerely,

Sheila Jacobs
